MFI offers several value-added services for its furniture industry clients, including companies that serve the institutional, health and furniture, and home décor markets.

For starters, the raw materials to build furniture and the foam needed to finish assembling sofas and seats are only minutes away. Consequently, MFI's clients can build furniture more expeditiously while simultaneously reducing purchasing costs.

Many large companies have benefited tremendously from another value-added service that MFI provides – MFI's proximity to the important American market. The cost of transporting large and heavy furniture can be huge, but MFI's location on the Mexican side of the El Paso-Ciudad Juarez border dramatically reduces transportation and labor costs.

In addition, MFI has provided a value-added service to all of its furniture industry clients by vigorously implementing the Six Sigma quality process. This means that all of its bedding products, soft goods, upholstered, tufted, seats, headboards, and sofas are perfect when they're manufactured.

The cooperative production process starts when MFI and the client-partner work together on the product's design and ends when the final product is sold to the company's customers. The process includes the following operations – design, engineering, sourcing, cutting and sewing, quality inspections shipping & distribution.

During the production process, MFI and the partner work with several suppliers rather than one, as the product moves along the supply chain. This strategy gives the partners several opportunities to improve the final product. It also often times improves the partners' economies of scale by giving them several opportunities to improve the production process and, thus, reduce their per unit costs.

MFI's partners also benefit from Mexico's 11 free trade agreements with 44 nations. These pacts reduce the customs duties imposed on goods imported to and exported from Mexico and, thus, give MFI's partners a competitive advantage over companies that manufacture their products in China and other Asian nations. MFI can also defer some duties through different production sharing scenarios. For an evaluation on specific product categories, give us a call.
